

TOO LONG AND TOO HIGH FOR HIS JAIL CELL

Capt. Charles L. Davis Charged with Disorderly Conduct at Gilsey House.

HIS PRISON CRAMPS HIM

Hotel Clerk Refuses His Check for $11.95 for Twelve Hours' Entertainment.

THEIR BLUE BLOOD BOILS.

Where to Call Out Every "Clark" in Motels, and Protest Against His Arrest.

Charles L. Davis, late Captain of the New York City Police, who was arrested at the Gilsey House, here of Baltimore Square, here of African, Indian and Chinese and the blood dandy of the West, London, is two inches too long, and an inch too high for his Jefferson Hotel prison cell. Owing to the inhumanity of the Gilsey House, he will be busy writing letters against the jail cell day to day. Davis and other prisoners, whose sympathy he will seek in his cell.

The discomfort of the long, blood dandy grows out of twelve hours' imprisonment at the Gilsey House. In the long language Capt. Davis got "sore" when he was told that he had to sleep on the floor of the cell. He was told that he had to sleep on the floor of the cell. He was told that he had to sleep on the floor of the cell.

My dear man, I've got a home in the bank, blame it all!

Dates Check Ahead.

The bank returned to is the New York National Bank, and when Capt. Davis was presented to Mr. Davis, he drew a check for that amount. Mr. Davis, George W. Moore, of the Gilsey House, did not want the completion of the check, and he did not want the completion of the check. He did not want the completion of the check.

Capt. Davis left the inhumanity of the Gilsey House, and he left the inhumanity of the Gilsey House. He left the inhumanity of the Gilsey House.

John station and remarked to the sergeant: "I'm going to call 'bout every clark in the h'm, blame he h'm not kindly send a h'm or two along with me to see I get fair play."

Cools Off in Cell.

"Why don't you take out one Mr. Clark at a time?" suggested the Sergeant. "You might get hurt if you mixed it up with the whole family."

This was lost on the six feet-three of British drawn, and he blew out of the station house twisting the ends of his blond whiskers with both hands. A squad of patrolmen followed, fearing destruction to the Gilsey House. When the Tenderloin squad reached the Gilsey the aristocratic Briton was hurling rich ballistics about the hotel corridor, and upon the request of Manager Moore he was driven to the station house and lodged in a cell. The returned before Magistrate Pool to-day, he got little sympathy from the worthy Judge. In fact, he couldn't wedge in a word before his case was disposed of, though after he heard that he was to spend another day in jail he exclaimed: "But blast it! I'm not a h'm, I'm a gentleman of aristocratic family."

"H'm Too High for This 'Ole," "Give him an aristocratic cell," cut in Magistrate Pool shortly, waving the case aside, and the protesting Briton was taken to the cell. The left wing of the pen. "Hi there, Turnkey," he cried out when the lock was sprung. "This is a beastly outrage, don't you know. I will send to the British Consul and demand satisfaction. Blame my luck, why is it that I've only got sixpence in me?"

Though the Court gave little heed to the young Englishman's statements about his respectability and his family, all that he claimed to be a "true, blue-blooded, Olive-Branch" declared to an Evening World reporter that the young man had been a captain of the London police, and a distinguished family and had performed gallant services in the South African war. "I'm a h'm, I'm a h'm," he said, and he would send for the young man's attorney and extricate him from his difficulties.

BARGAIN DAY SEEKERS AFTER SEPARATION.

Justice Fitzgerald Hears Evidence in Divorce Suits and Reserves Decision.

Because the attorney for Edgar P. Phillips failed to prove that a Chicago divorce on the ground of desertion was not legal in this State Justice Fitzgerald to-day in the bargain divorce court sent his action for divorce for Grace Elizabeth Phillips back for a future hearing.

Elizabeth Harrison Ruggles, a slender little woman with black hair, who appeared in a black velvet costume, asked for an absolute divorce from Edwin Dwyer Ruggles, a stock broker with an income of $5,000 to $10,000 a year, and the custody of their child, on the testimony of Janitor Edwards, of an up-town apartment house, and other witnesses, that Ruggles had been living since September last with another Mrs. Ruggles in this house.

"Was that Mrs. Ruggles like this Mrs. Ruggles?" his lawyer asked. "Yes, she is higher and has yellow hair," said Schwartz.

Frank Heine, an artist, claimed through A. P. Wagner that the "Marie Theresa Guiden" named in the certificate of birth of Hubert Otto Heine, who was identical with his runaway wife, Grace Heine, to whom he was married in April, 1933.

Decision was reserved in each case.

$10 FOR HUGGING GIRL ON A CAR PRIVATE LOCK-UP

Jacob Isaacs, Who Is Said to Own the Largest Part of Chinatown, Too Attentive to Miss Wallaner.

Jacob Isaacs, living at No. 313 East Eighty-seventh street, said to own the largest part of Chinatown and to be worth half a million dollars, was brought before Magistrate Moss in the Yorkville Court to-day on complaint of Miss Rosa Wallaner, of No. 415 East One Hundred and Seventeenth street, who testified that he annoyed her and hugged her on a Second Avenue "L" car.

Miss Wallaner, who is a typewriter of pretty face and figure, said that when the accused saw her in the car he attempted to flirt with her and, although she showed signs of resentment, he insisted on trying to gain her attention, while the two were standing close together, and finally hugged her around the shoulders. The girl reported the matter to the conductor, and at Seventy-first street a policeman took the man from the car.

When Isaacs was arraigned before Magistrate Moss he gave the name of Jacob Isaacs, and said that he was a tailor.

"Why, I know you; your name is Jacob Isaacs," exclaimed the Magistrate.

"Pardon me, Judge," cried the trembling man.

The Magistrate said that Isaacs was owner of nearly all the Chinatown property, was worth half a million dollars and was a man of family.

"You are a loafer for a married man to act as you have. I'm surprised and ashamed of you," exclaimed the Magistrate.

Isaacs almost fell upon his knees, begging forgiveness and insisting the affair was an accident. Miss Wallaner declared it was not an accident and that she had tried to make the man move away where there was plenty of room.

In consideration of Isaacs's family the Magistrate said he would dismiss the man with a $10 fine and a warning.

Accommodations for Witness Prisoners Have Been Provided on County Detective Hammond's Farm at Nanuet.

For the accommodation of witnesses who were formerly held under restraint in the County House of Detention in this city District-Attorney Jerome has established a lock-up of his own on the farm of Chief County Detective Hammond in Nanuet, Rockland County, thirty miles from Jersey City, on the New Jersey and New York Railroad.

On the farm live Hammond, his wife, sister-in-law and seven children, a man servant and, as the occasion requires, from six to nine more men, the same being witness prisoners and the detectives employed to guard them. The house which affords accommodations to these twenty or more persons is of eight rooms. At times the hospitality of Hammond's house has been so pressed that he has had to call upon his neighbors, George E. Blauvelt and Frederick Stecker, to house some of the witness prisoners and detectives guarding them.

Held in Spite of Protest.

Mr. Jerome says that he has not sent witnesses to Hammond's farm unless they were willing to go there in preference to being detained in New York, but C. J. Donovan, a stenographer, who has recently been one of Hammond's boarders at the instance of the District-Attorney, declares that he was taken there against his will and held when he was anxious to get bail. This ball, said he, could have been got had the opportunity been given him. Donovan was taken before the Grand Jury he was held at the Clarendon Hotel. Every day for a week or more he was taken to the District-Attorney's office. He appealed to Assistant District-Attorney Appleton to permit him to go, representing that he had employment awaiting him. He then demanded that he be taken to the House of Detention, where he could have got bail. This was refused him, he says, and he was told to keep quiet.

On Jan. 11 he was removed to Nanuet, where he was kept under guard until Feb. 17. Donovan alleges that while he was at Hammond's there were other witnesses there, and for each one of them the county paid Hammond $7.50 a week.

Woman Also Detained.

Another witness who was kept at the farm was Elizabeth Wilson, of No. 115 East Sixty-eighth street, who was a witness for the prosecution of Gertrude Wade, charged with manslaughter. Her friends allege that she was tricked into boarding a train and taken to Nanuet, where she was kept for a month.

George E. Blauvelt, speaking of the accommodations he gave some of Hammond's boarding prisoners, said that he charged Hammond $8 a week.
